POSTAL CARDS AS RECEIPTS.-A correspondent inquires whether it is against business etiquette to acknowledge the receipt of a letter on a postal card by "yours at hand, and contents noted," or "yours at hand, and contents noted," or to acknowledge the receipt of a remittance by "yours of yesterday received, with inclosure, as stated, in full to first instant." There is nothing "mean" in such a use of postal cards, but rather a positive advantage, since one side will be the acknowledgement of the receipt of money or order, and on the other the evidence of the date when it passed through the mails. This revives the old advantage of writing a letter on a single sheet of paper, folding it, writing the address on the outside, and mailing it to its place of destination. According to this method the official Post Office stamp showed when and where the letter stamp showed when and where the letter was mailed. On the introduction of envelopes this advantage was lost, since the writing was on one piece of paper and the direction and stamp on another, and their being no connection link between them, the actual mailing of a steer in an envelope is very level. and their being no connection link between them, the actual mailing of a letter in an envelope is very hard to prove. There is to be had, however, at some of the stationers, a combination of the letter sheet and envelope on one piece of paper; and this has the handiness of the envelope with the advantage of preserving the post-mark.—[Washington Chronicle.]

A CHABITABLE SOUL.—M. Audibert, Director of the Paris, Lyons and Mediterrancean Railway, was buried yesterday. He was a capable administrator, and an homme du mode. Many stories are now told of him. It is said he always emptied his pockets of money before getting home at night in deeds of charity, and one day left his cab with a single piece of money. As he put his foot on the ground, one of his finbitual beggars held out his hand and received the piece. M. Andibert had nothing left to pay the cab-Audibert had nothing left to pay the cab-man, who remarked that when one could not pay his fare one went on foot. A scene followed. Just then the beggar came up and offered to loan his day's earnings, four francs fifty centimes. M. Audibert accepted it with a hearty laugh, paid the cabman, and the next day sent the beggar 500 francs.—[From a Paris

How the President is Paid.—The Washington Star says: The President neverdraws his salary himself, but receives it through the First National Bank, to which he has given a power of attorney, and the money is always drawn from the Treasury by the cashier of the bank and placed to the credit of the President in the bank. The warrants for the salar of the President and Vice-President are made out at the Treasury every month, the former under the new law receiving $4,166.66 per month, and the latter $833.33. Members of the Cabinet are paid from the rolls of their respective departments, and receipt therefor the same as all other employees. The President and Vice-President do not sign any naveral.

A Grand Exhibition of Bree.—London is about to hold a beer jubilee, at which ales, stouts, porters and beer are to be put on exhibition. All the brewers of England, Ireland, Scotland, also of Bavaria, Austria, Prussia, Saxony, and other parts of Europe have sent casks of their productions. Each visitor, upon payment of a shilling, will be presented with a tasting ticket, entitling him to with a tasting ticket, entitling him to taste as much and of as many kinds of the stock on hand as he chooses. He can then vote for that which suits his
